

In the UK, 150,000 people have a stroke every year. Many of these will be left with a debilitating condition called aphasia, which may cause difficulties with speaking, reading, writing or understanding language. With a growing elderly population, it is also estimated that 750,000 people in the UK are living with a form of dementia, which can have a significant effect on the person's ability to communicate. In addition, up to 90% of people with learning disabilities have communication difficulties.

LTL Speech & Language Therapy Associates Ltd offers an independent speech and language therapy service to adults of all ages with a range of speech, language and communication needs in the South West. We offer a friendly and holistic service with individually tailored interventions.

What can we offer?

- Comprehensive assessment of speech, language and communication needs – identification of the individual's communicative strengths and weaknesses and the intervention required to develop skills for the person to maximise their communicative potential
- Individually tailored one-to-one therapy sessions
- Group therapy sessions
- Communication training (including advice, training and support for families, carers and professionals)
- Reminiscence therapy
- Development of individual communication resources
- Conversation groups within the individual's own environment

We are able to provide our services in the home or within residential environments and from our clinic base.
